This is quite different from the usual multi runway airports that we have been getting recently. The single runway (as in real life) will keep you busy, as well as the complex taxiway system that needs your full attention to stop head on's and collisions. The default traffic is busy and will keep you on your toes, with most of the remote parking spots being used.

When I loaded the Real Traffic for this airport, I found the traffic was not as busy and only the terminals and a few remote parking spaces were used, so I tweaked the egkk_terminal.txt file and now all remote parking is used as in real life and now it's busy as hell.

I will post a copy of the text in the discussions page for Tower3d Pro for those who want it.

The textures are not as crisp as the Barcelona airport (done by Nyerges Design) which is a shame as looking out of the tower you will see the difference between these airports, assuming you have both to compare that is!

Iv'e not seen any planes spinning at junctions so it looks like those bugs have been squashed for this airport.

Overall, it's a good depiction of London Gatwick and it will keep you busy for many hours.
